Australia Raises Points Test Threshold for Skilled Visas in 2026

February 5, 2026

The Department of Home Affairs has announced an increase to the minimum points test threshold for skilled migration visas, effective from July 2026. The Subclass 189, 190, and 491 visas will now require a minimum of 70 points, up from 65. This change reflects the government's commitment to attracting higher-calibre skilled migrants who can contribute more immediately to the Australian economy.

The updated points test will place greater emphasis on Australian work experience, STEM qualifications, and proficiency in community languages. Applicants with qualifications in priority sectors such as healthcare, engineering, and cybersecurity may receive additional points under a new 'National Priority' category.

Migration agents and immigration lawyers are advising prospective applicants to submit Expressions of Interest before the new threshold takes effect. Current EOIs in the SkillSelect system will be grandfathered under the existing 65-point threshold until September 2026.
